This course will teach basic tap rhythm exercises and steps to be set in dance combinations. This course will teach tap dance terminology and tap dance history. Students will learn proper body alignment, tap theory and style. These principles will be incorporated in regularly scheduled tap classes and tap choreography will be performed for the public.

Dance Style Description:

Tap dance is a form of dance characterized by a tapping sound that is created from metal plates that are attached to both the ball and heel of the dancer's shoe. These metal plates, when tapped against a hard surface, create a percussive sound and as such the dancers are considered to be musicians.

Early tappers like Fred Astaire provided a more ballroom look to tap dancing, while Gene Kelly used his extensive ballet training to make tap dancing incorporate all the parts of the ballet. This style of tap led to what is today known as "Broadway style," which is more mainstream in American culture. It often involves high heeled tap shoes and show music, and is usually the type of tap first taught to beginners. The best examples of this style are found in Broadway musicals such as 42nd Street.

The instructor will follow a semester time line to cover the following common tap steps: the shuffle, shuffle ball change, flap, flap heel, cramp roll, buffalo, Maxi Ford, single and double pullbacks, wings, Cincinnati, the shim sham shimmy (also called the Lindy), Irish, Waltz Clog, the paddle and roll, the paradiddle, stomp, brushes, scuffs, and single and double toe punches, heel clicks, single, double and triple time steps, riffs, military time step, and chugs. In the future, advanced tap dancing will combine basic steps together to create new steps.
